The epics of the Greek poet Homer, The Iliad and The Odyssey, have been recited around campfires and scrutinized by students for 2,800 years, if not longer. You might think that ancient copies of...

Oldest Greek Fragment of Homer Discovered on Clay Tablet ...
Five ancient Greek novels survive complete from antiquity: Chariton's Callirhoe, Achilles Tatius' Leucippe and Clitophon, Longus' Daphnis and Chloe, Xenophon of Ephesus' Ephesian Tale, and Heliodorus of Emesa's Aethiopica. There are also numerous fragments preserved on papyrus or in quotations, and summaries in Bibliotheca by Photius, a 9th-century Ecumenical Patriarch. The unattributed Metiochus and Parthenope may be preserved by what appears to be a faithful Persian translation by the poet Uns

We do have some papyrus fragments from elsewhere in the Graeco-Roman world, and some other writing materials survive from antiquity, notably the Vindolanda Tablets, found at Hadrian's Wall and now in the British Museum, and the writing-tablets found during recent excavations in London, and now at the Museum of London. But we should always bear in mind that our first-hand evidence for ancient books is heavily shaped by what books looked like in Egypt in particular, and this may not be ...
